

California Consumer Privacy Act/California Privacy Rights Act Verifiable Consumer Request for Correction of Personal Information

The goal of the California Consumer Privacy Act (CCPA) as amended by the California Privacy Rights Act (CPRA) is to enhance privacy rights and consumer protection for residents of California. This law applies to all California residents and allows them the right to access their personal information that we have collected and stored, the right to correct their personal information and the right to request we delete their stored personal information subject to exemptions within the law.

I request that Amica correct my personal information it maintains as follows (describe the personal information and how you want it to be corrected):

I understand that, while I have the right to request correction of my personal information identified above, Amica may be unable to correct the information as requested if the correction would be impossible, would involve disproportionate efforts, or because the information is otherwise accurate. I understand that Amica may also be unable to correct the information because of reasonable concerns regarding the accuracy of the information to be corrected, or because of reasonable concerns regarding fraud.
